

Airhead!

The diary of an air conditioning apprentice...

MONDAY

Bagged my first AI-Cool client today! Max said he'll pay me €150 commission – awesome! He said it could've been more but I should've sold the guy a higher specification. "But his house didn't need that", I said. "You pulling my plonker?" Max sneered, "What's that gotta do with it? It's time you joined the real world, son...!" But Max is still living in the old world, I reckon – the Algarve isn't cowboy-land any more... Nowadays there are proper companies offering decent service, like Penguin – probably why Max hates them...

TUESDAY

Blimey, dad's furious with Max for ripping him off, after Penguin did an air-con service at our house and pointed out that we have an over-expensive system. And at work Max is p*d off with me, for reminding him that dad's on the warpath... So I'm in the do-do either way and it was nothing to do with me... Sooo not fair!

WEDNESDAY

Embarrassing! Dad burst into the office and demanded €300 compensation but Max refused. Dad told me to leave the office but Max told me to stay. I didn't know what to do so I hid in the toilet. When I came back dad had gone, but Max said that he'd paid him €150 and they'd 'come to a deal' (whatever that means)...

THURSDAY

Installed my client's air-con today. He paid on-the-spot so Max gave me my €150 commission – brilliant! Odd, though – that was the only time all day that Max smiled...

FRIDAY

*Whaaaaat?! Dad's taken my commission cash off me to make up the full €300 compensation from AI-Cool... Then he went to The Watering Hole for a drink – with Max! OMG – they've stitched me up!*
